Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Six years ago I had an attack of indigestion and liver complaint that lasted for weeks. I was unable to do any hard work, had no appetite, food distressed me, and I suffered much from headache. My skin was sallow, and sleep did not refresh me. I tried several remedies without obtaining any relief. Finally, one of my customers recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It helped me from the first—in fact, after taking six bottles I was completely cured, and could eat anything and sleep like a child."

DR. SINCLAIR ON CONSUMPTION

A PORTION OF THE VERY INTERESTING AND IMPORTANT PAPER READ BEFORE THE HAWAIIAN TERRITORIAL MEDICAL SOCIETY AT ITS RECENT ANNUAL MEETING IN HONOLULU.

The following is a portion of the paper on Tuberculosis Pulmonalis read by Dr. A. N. Sinclair before the meeting of the Territorial Medical Society. The portions of the paper regarding the treatment of the disease have already been published by the Star:

Tuberculosis pulmonalis is the most important disease that the medical practitioner has to deal with. Not alone on account of the vital importance it has for the patient affected, but also on account of the great menace to public health every case of this disease must be.

All physicians have not the same opportunity for observing cases of this nature, nor the same incentive, perhaps, to a study of the subject. Having had both the opportunity and the incentive, as Medical Superintendent of the Leahi Home, and believing I may have acquired some stray odds and ends of information, of value to the profession at large, although I can lay but little claim to originality, I venture to present to you in this paper an epitome of some facts that I have found of value to myself in dealing with this disease.

Further as I do not consider my comparatively limited experience, in a disease of such a vast scope as tuberculosis pulmonalis, sufficient to render me an authority on the subject, my remarks will be guided by those of others who, in my estimation, are such. Also very early, or incipient cases, having comprised the great minority of the cases coming under my observation, I have given the authorities precedence in referring to them. With this apology for what may in parts appear a compilation rather than an original thesis, I will begin.

The best classification of tuberculosis pulmonalis I have found to keep the varieties clear in one's mind, is that of Bridge, but I have taken the liberty of rearranging it to my own convenience, although fundamentally it is that of the authority quoted.

I have separated the eight varieties he mentions, into four characterized by the formation of a great deal of fibrosis, and four with little or no fibrosis, this latter group being, with one exception, much more rapid in course than the former.

Of the four with fibrosis, in two the fibrosis is localized, more or less circumscribing the disease, in two the fibrosis is diffuse.

Of the two classes in which the fibrosis is diffuse it may be in one form confined to the mucous membrane itself, lining the bronchi and bronchioles, or in the other form it may affect the tissues immediately beneath the mucous membrane.

Of the two forms in which the fibrosis is circumscribed, the fibrosis may be considerable, and suffice to wall off the lesion from the rest of the lung, or it may be just sufficient to cut off, by its contraction, the blood supply to the septa between the air vesicles, thereby causing absorption of these desanguinated partitions, resulting in a constantly progressive amalgamation of air vesicles in the affected part, increasing the capacity of the air vesicles but at the very evident cost of aerating surface.

The first mentioned form of the two classes under consideration, in which the disease is completely walled off, is the most favorable in prognosis of all forms of the disease; the amalgamating vesicular form, as I will take the liberty of naming it, while more favorable than some others, is the least favorable of the fibrous varieties, but it may be years before a fatal termination occurs.

Of the four forms that form the great second division of the varieties of the disease, namely those with little or no fibrosis, we can again divide these into circumscribed and diffuse.

Of the two that are localized, without fibrosis, one is distinctive on account of the suppurative process that ensues, and the portion of the lung involved is most seriously affected. Mixed infection takes place, cavities form from the resulting suppuration, and on account of absorption of septic products, there is great hyper-pyrexia. This is the most rapid that it has received the name of "galloping consumption." Indeed death is more often due to pus-absorption, from the mixed infection, than to a simple tubercular process.

The second form, of the localized, non-fibrous varieties, comprises a class of cases in which the apex of the right lung is alone affected, and this may heal without further involvement of the lung, or the healing may be followed by a tubercular process in the left apex, which may in turn heal, or it may progress to a fatal termination without the right apex becoming again involved. This class of cases, already alluded to, is the exceptional form of tubercular disease of the lung without fibrosis that is not as malignant as some of the fibrous forms. In fact where the right apex heals, and the left apex does not become affected, it is probably the most benign.

Of the diffuse varieties without fibrosis, one is characterized by a rapid spread of the disease to other organs, e. g. kidneys, stomach, and so forth, and is a most serious condition. The other class is characterized by wide and extensive deposits scattered rather uniformly over a large portion of one lung, or it may be both lungs, the true "miliary tuberculosis."

FAREWELL TO LABOR LEADER

word he had said. He urged all union men to pull together.

Matt Heffern, President of the Labor Council, was then called on the spoke of Cahalan's work for labor and labor organizations in Hawaii. "He has been a valuable member of the organization," said the President, "and we are very sorry to lose brother Cahalan. He has been a worker always for the interests of unionism in this town and this Territory." He claimed that the unions now contain all the intelligent workmen, that the railroads and other corporations employing large forces of men "have given in to union labor." "Citizen labor," he said, "in this Territory does not mean union labor, but I would advise the planters to employ union labor."

CUTS HIS WAY OUT OF CELL

DESERTER CONFINED AT FORT BAKER MANAGES TO GAIN HIS FREEDOM AND ESCAPE.

FORT BAKER, November 11.—Private Buckler, a recaptured deserter of the Thirty-second Infantry, who has been a prisoner here for the last two months, effected his escape at a late hour Friday evening by cutting the bars of his cell. An alarm was turned in and several corporal's guards were detailed to make a search for him. They searched the water front and the hills without striking his trail. The authorities are at a loss to account for the manner in which Buckler passed the sentry. All avenues of departure are being closely watched. Buckler escaped several months ago and was recently brought back from Los Angeles. He has escaped so often that he
